

Project narrative

The research objective of this study is to systematically address the concerns of autonomous robot safety, thereby creating safer and more capable robotic systems. While the methods proposed herein will be applicable to all robotic applications, systems which are meant to interact with alert and awake people will benefit directly. In the future, making these systems more human-friendly will improve the quality of life for millions who could benefit from the advantages provided by robotic technologies in health care.